10 KAYING VUE

11 Plaintiff,

No. CIV S-04-1772 CMK

12 vs.

13 JO ANNE B. BARNHART,
14 Commissioner of Social Security,

15 Defendant.

ORDER

17
18 Plaintiff, Kaying Vue, brings this action pursuant to 42 U.S.C. § 405(g), seeking 19 judicial review of a decision of the Commissioner of Social Security (hereinafter Commissioner) 20 denying his application for Supplemental Security Income benefits (SSI), which was based on 21 the provisions of Title XVI of the Social Security Act. The parties have filed cross motions for 22 summary judgment. As both parties have consented to magistrate jurisdiction, the motions are 23 before the undersigned for decision. For the reasons reflected below, plaintiff's motion is 24 DENIED and the Commissioner's motion is GRANTED.

1 I. BACKGROUND

2 Plaintiff filed an application for SSI benefits on October 31, 2001, alleging an 3 inability to work due to severe back pain, knee pain and gout related arthritis. Plaintiff's 4 application was denied initially and upon reconsideration.

5 At the hearing before the ALJ¹, plaintiff was represented by an attorney and 6 testified through an interpreter. (Tr. 223.) Plaintiff testified that he was fifty-seven years old 7 and had a tenth grade education in his native Laos. (Tr. 224.) In Laos plaintiff served in the 8 army. (Tr. 224.) Plaintiff was a vocational instructor in the United States. (Tr. 224.) He stopped
9 this work in 1986 because the "program finished." (Tr. 225.) He stated that foot, knee and back
10 pain have kept him from working. (Tr. 225.)

11 Plaintiff testified that he can walk fifteen minutes a day. (Tr. 226.) He helps his 12 wife with housework and laundry. (Tr. 227.) Plaintiff cannot mow the lawn, but he does wash 13 dishes occasionally. (Tr. 227.) Plaintiff does not go to the store. (Tr. 227.) Plaintiff stated that, 14 in the afternoon, he watches television, reads magazines and sometimes dusts. (Tr. 228.)

15 Plaintiff testified that, since 2002, he has seen his physician once a month. (Tr.
16 225.) He testified that he takes four different kinds of medications; one for cholesterol, one for 17 gout, one for knee and back pain, and one for stroke prevention. (Tr. 225.) Plaintiff stated that 18 he received about five to six hours of relief after taking the painkiller. (Tr. 226.)

19 In his motion for summary judgment, plaintiff set forth the ALJ's summary of the 20 medical evidence. The Commissioner stipulates that the ALJ fairly and accurately summarized 21 the medical evidence. Accordingly, as both parties are familiar with the medical evidence, the 22 undersigned will not re-state it here.

24 ///

25 ¹As discussed later in this order, plaintiff had two hearings before the ALJ. The relevant 26 testimony is taken from the March 1, 2004 hearing.

1 In a written decision dated July 23, 2003, the ALJ denied plaintiff's 2 application. (Tr. 27-33.) Plaintiff requested an Appeals Council review of the decision. The 3 Appeals Council granted plaintiff's request for review of the ALJ's decision, vacated it and 4 remanded the case for further proceedings. (Tr. 24-26, 193-95.) There was a new ALJ hearing
5 on March 1, 2004. (Tr. 221-34.) The ALJ issued a new written decision on March 22, 2004,
6 denying plaintiff's claim. (Tr. 11-18.) The decision of the ALJ became final when the Appeals
7 Council denied plaintiff's request for a review on June 28, 2004. The plaintiff filed a timely 8 appeal in this court on August 26, 2004.

9 II. STANDARD OF REVIEW

10 This court's review is limited to whether the Commissioner's decision to deny 11 benefits to plaintiff is based on proper legal standards under 42 U.S.C. § 405(g) and supported 12 by substantial evidence on the record as a whole. See Copeland v. Bowen, 861 F.2d 536, 538
13 (9th Cir. 1988) (citing Desrosiers v. Secretary of Health and Human Services, 846 F.2d 573, 14 575-76 (9th Cir. 1988)). Substantial evidence means more than a mere scintilla of evidence, but 15 less than a preponderance, Saelee v. Chater, 94 F.3d 520, 521 (9th Cir. 1996) (citing Sorensen v.
16 Weinberger, 514 F.2d 1112, 1119 n.10 (9th Cir. 1975)). "It means such evidence as a reasonable 17 mind might accept as adequate to support a conclusion." Richardson v. Perales, 402 U.S. 389, 18 402, 91 S. Ct. 1420 (1971) (quoting Consolidated Edison Co. v. N.L.R.B., 305 U.S. 197, 229, 59 19 S. Ct. 206 (1938)). The court must consider both evidence that supports and evidence that 20 detracts from the Commissioner's decision, but the denial of benefits shall not be overturned 21 even if there is enough evidence in the record to support a contrary decision. See Jones v.
22 Heckler, 760 F.2d 993, 995 (9th Cir. 1985). If substantial evidence supports the administrative 23 findings, or if there is conflicting evidence supporting a finding of either disability or 24 nondisability, the finding of the ALJ is conclusive, see Sprague v. Bowen, 812 F.2d 1226, 1229-25 30 (9th Cir. 1987), and may be set aside only if an improper legal standard was applied in 26 weighing the evidence. See Burkhart v. Bowen, 856 F.2d 1335, 1338 (9th Cir. 1988).

III. DISCUSSION

Plaintiff contends that the ALJ improperly rejected the opinion of plaintiff's treating physician, Wu Hsiung Su, M.D. The court disagrees. "The opinion of a treating physician is not necessarily conclusive as to either the physical condition or the ultimate issue of disability." Morgan v. Apfel, 169 F.3d 595, 600 (9th Cir. 1999). An ALJ may reject the uncontradicted opinion of a treating physician only for "clear and convincing" reasons. See Lester v. Chater, 81 F.3d 821, 831 (9th Cir. 1995). When conflicting medical evidence is presented, however, the ALJ must resolve the conflict. See Andrews v. Shalala, 53 F.3d 1035, 1041 (9th Cir. 1995). Although the treating physician's opinion is given deference, the ALJ may reject the opinion of the treating physician in favor of a contradicting opinion of an examining physician, providing the ALJ makes findings setting forth specific, legitimate reasons for doing so that are based on substantial evidence in the record. See Magallanes v. Bowen, 881 F.2d 747, 751 (9th Cir.1989). The ALJ may satisfy this requirement by setting out a summary of the facts and conflicting clinical evidence, stating his interpretation thereof, and making findings. See Thomas v. Barnhart, 278 F.3d 947, 957 (9th Cir. 2002).

Additionally, the general rule set forth by Magallanes does not apply when the nontreating physician relies on independent clinical findings that differ from the findings of the treating physician. See Magallanes, 881 F.2d at 751. Where the opinion of the treating physician is contradicted, and the opinion of the nontreating physician is based on independent clinical findings that differ from those of the treating physician, the opinion of the nontreating source may itself be substantial evidence. See Andrews, 53 F.3d at 1041. It is then solely the province of the ALJ to resolve the conflict between the treating and the nontreating source. See id.

Here, the ALJ noted that there was conflict between the findings of Janet O'Brian, M.D. and plaintiff's treating physician, Dr. Su. (Tr. 15.) In resolving this conflict in favor of Dr. O'Brian's findings, the ALJ noted that the record shows that, despite plaintiff's subjective

1 complaints of pain, he has required very little medical care, did not have objective clinical 2 findings of degenerative disease and has not required surgery or prescription pain medications.
3 (Tr. 15.) The ALJ also considered that the record indicated that plaintiff's condition had 4 improved in January and February of 2000 and that plaintiff's gout was stable through October
5 of 2000. (Tr. 137-147.) The ALJ considered that radiological imaging studies in April of 2003 6 showed the plaintiff's lumbar x-rays were for the most part normal and that plaintiff had 7 relatively normal wrist x-rays. (Tr. 154.) The ALJ noted that the independent objective medical 8 records in this case, upon which the consultative physician based her findings, supported the 9 conclusion that plaintiff maintained the residual functional capacity (RFC) to perform work at all 10 exertional levels, except for an inability to climb. See Magallanes, 881 F.2d at 751-55 (stating 11 that an ALJ can meet his burden of setting out specific reasons for rejecting the controverted 12 opinion of a treating physician by setting out a detailed summary of the facts and conflicting 13 medical evidence and stating his interpretation).

14 Further, the ALJ cited to other evidence in the record that supported his finding 15 that plaintiff had the RFC to perform work at all exertional levels. The ALJ noted that Dr. Su's 16 treatment notes did not corroborate his opinion that plaintiff was incapable of even sedentary 17 exertion. See id. Instead, the treatment notes show that plaintiff's arthritis improved with the 18 use of pain medication. (Tr. 147.) Dr. Su notes that plaintiff is capable of aerobic exercise as 19 tolerated and can self ambulate. (Tr. 147.) Dr. Su's evaluation notes that the medical findings 20 that support his assessment are "pain and weakness." (Tr. 151, 152, 153.) The ALJ reasonably 21 inferred that Dr. Su's opinion was not based on objective clinical findings and was based instead 22 on plaintiff's own self serving descriptions of pain and weakness. See Gallant v. Heckler, 753
23 F.2d 1450, 1453 (9th Cir. 1984)(stating that and ALJ may draw inferences logically flowing 24 from the evidence).

25 Plaintiff relies heavily on the argument that the ALJ's conclusions are not 26 supported by the evidence because the ALJ incorrectly identified Dr. Su as Dr. Wo-Hsiung,

1 which is why the ALJ could not find Dr. Su's records. Despite the ALJ's reference to plaintiff's
2 treating physician by an incorrect name, the substantial evidence relied on by the ALJ supports
3 his conclusion that plaintiff retained the RFC for work at all exertional levels, with a restriction
4 on climbing. Specifically, the ALJ noted that the objective medical findings contradicted Dr.
5 Su's Assessment of Ability to do Work-Related Physical Activity (Assessment). The ALJ
6 further noted that the Assessment completed by Dr. Su relied heavily on plaintiff's subjective 7 complaints of pain instead of any objective findings.

8 In summary, the ALJ indicated that he discredited the treating physician's opinion 9 because it could not be supported by objective evidence from any of plaintiff's medical 10 examinations. The ALJ weighed the conflicting medical evidence and set forth his own 11 interpretation of such, explaining why his interpretation, rather than the treating physician's 12 opinion, was correct. See Embrey v. Bowen, 849 F.2d 418, 421-22 (9th Cir. 1988).

13 Plaintiff next challenges the ALJ's conclusion that his testimony was not credible.
14 If there is medical evidence of an underlying impairment, the ALJ may not discredit a 15 claimant's testimony as to the severity of the symptoms merely because they are unsupported by 16 objective medical evidence. See Bunnell, 947 F.2d at 347-48. The ALJ must identify what 17 testimony is not credible and what evidence undermines the claimant's complaints. See Lester, 18 81 F.3d at 834. In weighing a claimant's credibility, the ALJ may consider his reputation for 19 truthfulness, inconsistencies either in his testimony or between his testimony and his conduct, his 20 daily activities, his work record, and testimony from physicians and third parties concerning the 21 nature, severity and effect of the symptoms of which he complains. See Thomas, 278 F.3d at 22 958-59.

23 Plaintiff argues that the ALJ's credibility determination is not supported by the 24 record because there is no evidence that plaintiff had extensive daily living activities and the 25 ALJ erred in stating that plaintiff mowed the lawn. The undersigned finds, however, that ALJ's 26 credibility determination is supported by substantial evidence in the record. The plaintiff

1 testified during the hearing that he washes dishes a little and does laundry. (Tr. 227.) He also 2 stated that he can walk for up to twenty minutes and sometimes cooks and dusts. (Tr. 226, 227.)
3 The ALJ further considered that the medical records revealed that plaintiff's gout was improving
4 and that plaintiff's x-rays were unremarkable. Specifically, the ALJ noted that plaintiff did not 5 have any objective findings of degenerative disease which would have supported plaintiff's 6 subjective complaints. Finally, the ALJ noted that plaintiff had not required any surgeries and 7 ambulated without any aid. See Johnson v. Shalala, 60 F.3d 1428, 1434 (9th Cir. 1995)(stating 8 that the ALJ may consider the conservative nature of treatments when evaluating subjective 9 complaints). The ALJ relied on evidence such that a reasonable mind might accept as adequate 10 to support a conclusion that plaintiff could engage in work at all exertional levels. See 11 Richardson, 402 U.S. at 402; see also, Rollins v. Massanari, 261 F.3d 853, 857 (9th Cir.
12 2001)(stating that if the ALJ's interpretation of a claimant's contention is reasonable and 13 supported by substantial evidence, even where a contrary finding may also be reasonable, it is 14 not the court's role to second guess the ALJ's interpretation). The undersigned concludes that 15 the ALJ's findings support his conclusion that plaintiff's complaints of pain were not credible.

16 IV. CONCLUSION

17 The ALJ's decision is fully supported by substantial evidence in the record and 18 based on the proper legal standards. Accordingly, IT IS HEREBY ORDERED that:

- 19 1. Plaintiff's motion for summary judgment or remand is denied, and
- 20 2. The Commissioner's cross motion for summary judgment is granted.
